

Telephone company fees covering regulatory expenses ought to be included in their rates -- if there are any regulated phone companies left standing after the competition with cable providers.